Children and young people got to grips with the range of free activities on offer at Woodberry Down fun day, such as the Albion Kids ship

BRIGHT sunshine, free food and lots of familyfriendly activities brought local people out in their droves for the Woodberry Down summer fun day on 17 June.

The crowd tucked into a free barbecue and were treated to live music and performances from local dance groups. As well as taster sessions for activities, people got to meet Council officers and find out about the massive regeneration scheme under way at Woodberry Down, which will build more than 5,500 new homes for the borough.

Meanwhile, the kids got on with the serious business of having fun.

For more photos from the day, see pages 6-7.

Council launched Volunteering for Hackney with grassroots community groups and organisations across the borough on 20 June

Cheers for volunteers

Volunteering and social

the sense of isolation that participation helps to reduce

OCAL organisations are being asked to Itake part in a new Council initiative to help small voluntary groups make a big difference in their communities.

The Volunteering for Hackney initiative was launched at Hackney Museum on 20 June by Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, and Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, Cllr Jon Burke.

Around 50 people attended from organisations including literacy charity Hackney Pirates, repair and reuse project Hackney Fixers, cooking school Bags of Taste, anti hate crime trust Stop Hate UK, and sports clubs Hackney Wick FC and Mini Mermaids.

The project was developed after extensive consultation undertaken by the Council in 2015 identified that residents wanted to get to know each other, contribute to their community, and take greater responsibility for looking after their environment.

The Council is looking for groups to participate in Volunteering for Hackney, and in return will offer structured, strategic support.

This includes everything from help setting up a Facebook page or a website, to filling in grant applications, learning how to get the best out of volunteers through the right training, and setting up as a registered charity.

Volunteer Centre Hackney and Hackney CVS have joined forces with the Council to promote the scheme and provide training.

Mayor Glanville, said: "I am passionate that community action is central to responding to some of the biggest challenges we as a borough face.

"When I was elected last September I added a greater focus on volunteering in the Cabinet to reflect the challenges community groups are beginning to face. I also pledged to create a new network to support more volunteering and community involvement right across the borough.

"I was proud to launch this initiative, Volunteering for Hackney, and hope many grassroots organisations and activists can get involved."

Cllr Jon Burke, who has responsibility for volunteering, added: "We know that volunteering and greater social participation in our community helps to reduce the sense of isolation and resentment that inequality can produce.

Volunteering for Hackney will seek to harness the incredible enthusiasm and resourcefulness of our grassroots voluntary organisations to combat these challenges."

ACKNEY Council staff have been helping those affected by the devastating fire at Grenfell Tower in Kensington, as well as taking measures to reassure residents about the safety of blocks and estates across the borough.

Staff from departments including Adult Social Care, Children's Social Care and Housing Needs have been at the scene, supporting people since 18 June as part of a London-wide response to the tragedy.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "No one can fail to be moved watching the coverage of the terrible fire and its aftermath, as well as the continuing challenges faced by survivors and the wider community.

"On the Sunday after the fire, councils across London received a call to help with the effort in supporting all of the families affected by the tragedy.

"Hackney Council was one of the first to respond, with some of our social workers arriving by the Sunday afternoon, to be a point of contact for those in need of help.

"This is just one small example of how Hackney, as well as other councils and ordinary Londoners, is helping the Londonwide response to support Grenfell Tower residents."

In Hackney, robust procedures are in place to ensure all blocks have an up-to-date fire risk assessment, and none of the Council's blocks have the type of cladding used at Grenfell Tower.

However, in order to reassure residents, the Council has produced an action plan, which has been approved by an independent fire adviser.

A fire safety review will be undertaken, as well as a review of cladding used on Council blocks.

Hackney has 181 blocks

Taking action

The Council is taking the following measures:

- Writing to all estate residents outlining measures already taken to make homes safe
- Reviewing fire safety across borough, looking into range of fire safety measures, such as fire safety signs and information given to residents
- Independent review of all cladding used on Hackney estates. This will involve the removal of sections of cladding for testing
- Fire Risk Assessments for medium to high rise blocks of five storeys will be reviewed
- Fire Risk Assessments will be made available to view online
- A meeting will be held with local housing associations to discuss fire safety

We understand residents are concerned and want to reassure them fire safety is of critical importance to us over five storeys high.

Sprinklers will be fully

Sprinklers will be fully explored as part of these reviews and the Council will move to install them if recommended to do so by an independent fire adviser, or following advice from the London Fire Brigade.

Over the coming days and weeks Council staff and cladding experts, Cladtech Associates, will be on estates, carrying out tests. They will be easily identifiable and will carry ID.

Mayor Glanville said: "While the cause of the fire hasn't yet been officially confirmed, we understand that residents are concerned and we want to reassure residents in Hackney that fire safety is of critical importance to us, and the Council meets regularly with the London Fire Brigade to ensure we're doing all we can to keep our estates and residents safe.

"We also work with an independent fire advisory service to rigorously test and challenge our existing arrangements and will open up this work to public scrutiny including publishing all our current fire risk assessments and additional block specific fire safety information in due course.

"It's only right that we take stock now, and we have commissioned an expert independent company to carry out a review, to allow us to give residents some extra peace of mind. Staff are busy completing this work now, and we will keep residents up dated as to the outcome of the review, and other measures we are taking to provide added reassurance."

The Council has also asked all social housing providers in the borough to investigate the cladding on their properties.

Where action is being taken in response to this, housing providers will write to tenants to update them.

A message from the Mayor, Philip Glanville, and Cabinet Member for Community Safety, Cllr Caroline Selman

WE were shocked to hear of the events in Finsbury Park this month, when Londoners were attacked after leaving evening prayers. Our deepest sympathies and thoughts go out to all those affected by the attack.

We're doing all we can to work with the police, community leaders and our partners across the borough to make sure that our residents are free to live as they choose.

We spent the weekend at several of the Big Lunch, Great Get Together and More in Common events across Hackney. Each one of these were fantastic events, with lots of fun and all of Hackney's community out in force. They were a celebration of Hackney's diversity and proved that the spirit of Hackney is something to be very proud of. Hackney is a brilliant place, where people from all backgrounds, different nationalities. religions and sexualities share streets, schools, parks, halls, workplaces and, crucially, our common values of tolerance and respect. We owe it to those affected by recent events, to ensure that our borough and capital keeps those values and remains the special, welcoming place that it is.

Clockwise from top: Tug-of-war at the old school gardens, Chelmer Road; balloons and bunting at the Oldfield Road street party; the Anthology Big Lunch event in Shoreditch Park ESIDENTS were out in force in glorious sunshine as they took part in Big Lunch community celebrations on 17 June.

This year, the event which encourages neighbours to get to know each other better, also coincided with the Great Get Together, a national celebration to mark the first anniversary of the death of Jo Cox MP.

Several Big Lunches took place across the borough.

In Oldfield Road, Stoke Newington, the Fire Brigade cooled everyone down in the 30-degree heat. While the gardens of the old school on Chelmer Road, in Homerton, hosted another Big Lunch, as did Anthology and Higgins, partners in the Council's regeneration of Colville Estate, in Shoreditch Park.

There were also Great Get Together events at Hackney Community College, which featured food, music, a fashion show and interfaith discussions, and a street party in Wilton Way, E8, including a dog show, bake off and community sing-a-long.

Hackney marks carers week

CARERS Week saw Hackney celebrate the work of thousands of local people caring for loved ones, through a series of events, including a well-being day, carers' rights workshop and lunchtime seminars.

Nearly 18,000 people in Hackney provide different levels of unpaid care and support each week to a friend, neighbour or relative because of illness or old age. Yet three in four carers don't feel like their role is understood or valued by their community.

The Council and City and Hackney Carer's Centre (CHCC) are working with the community to increase awareness of the valuable work carers do for society, while offering them more support.

Many carers in the borough are not accessing the support already on offer through the centre, which can have a big impact on improving their quality of life. This has been a lifeline for some of the borough's unsung caring heroes.

Brenda Martin, who uses the carers centre, said: "Registering at CHCC has improved my life. I was unaware of what my son and I were entitled to. I have received fantastic support, financially and emotionally." Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Devolution, said: "I strongly urge carers to contact the carers centre to find out more about the support on offer."

Any resident providing care for someone can also get a carer's assessment to discuss the help they may need by e-mailing: CCSadmin@hackneycarers.org.uk
For more information about services, local support groups and carers rights, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/carers; or call: 020 020 8533 0951.

From transport to the arts, Hackney's heroes honoured

HACKNEY had more reason than ever to celebrate the Queen's birthday this year, as a host of residents were recognised on her honours list.

Emily Brooke was awarded an MBE for her services to the economy and transport after launching Laserlight, a bike light lauded as a revolution in cycle safety.

The entrepreneur, 31, pictured, whose business Blaze is based in Shoreditch, created a laser that projects the image of a bike six meters in front of cyclists, making their presence obvious even when they are in a blind spot.

Tarek Malouf,

founder of the famed

Asif
Amir Khan received

Hummingbird Bakery, was awarded an MBE to architecture. While for services to baking and confectionary, having expanded to six premises his MBE for services to architecture. While fellow E9 resident Oladele Woye, executive officer at Department for Work and Pensions, was honoured with an MBE for services to the DWP and the East London community.

Franklyn Harris, learning

ambassador at the Learning and Work Institute, also received and MBE for services to adult learning and skills.

The former head of the Electoral Commission, Jenny Watson, received a CBE for services to electoral democracy, while Stoke Newington artist Idris Khan received an OBE for services to art.

David Dewing, former director of the Geffrye Museum in Hoxton, also received an OBE for services to the arts.

He retired from the Geffrye at the end of last year, after 25 years at the helm. Sonia Solicari, the current director, said: "This is wonderful recognition for both David and the Geffrye Museum."

T'S so important that families come into the museum," enthuses Sonia Solicari, the director of the Geffrye Museum.

Adding: "The learning you can do in that informal environment with your loved ones can really shape you for the rest of your life."

She speaks from experience. Growing up in Enfield, North London, her mother took her to countless museums.

That's how the young Sonia discovered not only what being a curator meant, but also that there was a good chance she might want to spend her life doing it.

So, after gaining a degree in English Literature at Royal Holloway she went on to do a masters degree in 19th-century studies before gamely applying for jobs in museums.

She reveals: "I must have applied for 50 and I didn't get a single one."

Here, she says, is where the story gets 'a little controversial'. As well as going back to university to pursue museum studies, she did a huge amount of volunteer work in museums.

"Just being in a position to do unpaid internships is a luxury so many can't afford.

"I moved back into my parents house to make it work. I did temping jobs, worked in a bakery...

"People should really be paid for the work they do, but I've no doubt that the experience helped me on

Sonia Solicari, Director of the Geffrye Museum, is determined to carry on the museum's long history of youth engagement to the ladder," she says.

Today, she is enthusiastic about preserving the Geffrye Museum's long history of youth engagement, citing its

We're consulting with young people on the content for our new galleries. Their ideas will be central to their development

Curriculum Vitae: Sonia Solicari

Born in Enfield, London

Graduates from Royal Holloway in English Literature 1999 Joins the Victoria and Albert Museum as an 2002

assistant curator

Appointed Principle Curator at the Guildhall Art Gallery 2010

2017 Appointed Director of the Geffrye Museum Young Consultants programme as an example of the paid opportunities open to those aged between 16 and 24.

"Other museums have long looked to the Geffrye Museum as a pioneer in this regard.

"At this very moment, we're consulting with young people on the content for our new galleries.

"Their ideas will be central to their development."

Back in 2002, however, the young Sonia's hard graft finally paid off when she was accepted on to the Victoria and Albert (V&A) Museum's trainee programme for assistant curators.

"It's like joining the army. You apply, and then they post you to a department. I was posted to paintings and I learnt my trade as a curator there."

Not that there weren't bumps along the way.

"Four years in, I moved to ceramics. Some hadn't been handled for centuries and when you pick them up, they come apart in your hands.

"I think that's happened to all of us at some stage," she says.

From the V&A she moved to the Guildhall Art Gallery where she became head of the gallery.

The Geffrye Museum, however 'has always been my favourite museum'.

She adds: "It's partly its beautiful location, the idea of working in such a tranquil, inspiring space."

It is also the Geffrye's stated theme: museum of the home.

She says: "The story of the home is so universal, so strong and yet so flexible. That's what makes it so exciting, but also such a challenge.'

Tranquil, however, doesn't describe the role into which she was immediately plunged, running an enormous project called 'Unlocking the Geffrye'.

This will see £18million ploughed into the development of brand new spaces and, she says, 'create incredible new opportunities for the museum'.

She adds: "It might not be visible to visitors' eyes yet, but the structural engineers, architects and designers are all hard at work behind the scenes. We're all beavering away."

After all it's what Sonia Solicari does best.

HE Council marked National Clean Air Day on 15 June by showing off its ever-expanding electric vehicle fleet.

By next April, the Council will be using over 40 electric vehicles, including those driven by street engineers, buggies for parks staff, and mobile community library vans.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: "Air pollution is a problem that we're doing all we can to tackle, and this includes replacing diesel vehicles with electric ones."

Electric vehicle charging points in Hackney have been increased to 46 at 23 locations.

It's the Council's ambition that, from 2025, all households in Hackney will be less than 500 metres from a vehicle charging point.

Hackney, Islington and Tower Hamlets councils have also partnered with the Zero Emissions Network to launch a 'parklet' in Calvert Avenue on the city fringe, which replaces two car parking spaces with seating, cycle parking and greenery.

Businesses, delivery riders and local food companies in Hackney, Islington and Tower Hamlets are also being encouraged to go electric.

They can access grants from the Zero Emissions Network to go towards electric vans and scooters, cargo bikes and even showers.

Plus Hackney Council is offering three months free membership of Source London, which runs the

Proposals to reduce vehicles

PROPOSALS to reduce traffic in residential streets around Frampton Park Road, Darnley Road and Elsdale Street are being consulted on.

During the past 18 months, the Council has been analysing traffic speed, volume and accidents in the area. Residents have also raised concerns about the difficulties pedestrians experience at the junction of Elsdale Street with Well Street, and Elsdale Street with Terrace Road due to through traffic. As a result, the Council has developed a scheme to reduce the amount of vehicles using these residential roads. Find out more about the proposals by visiting: consultation.hackney.gov.uk.

There will also be a drop in session on 10 July, from 6pm to 9pm at Frampton Park Community Hall. The consultation closes on 21 July.

Curb traffic, respondents say

RESEARCH is underway to try to improve the traffic system in Broadway Market. The road's narrow width can lead to conflict between different road users and high maintenance costs. Earlier this year, the charity Sustrans spoke to visitors, residents and businesses concerning traffic in Broadway Market.

The majority felt there was too much traffic; vehicle speeds were too fast; and that they would support solutions to improve conditions for walking and cycling

These findings will help inform future proposals to improve the traffic system in Broadway Market. For more details, visit: http://news.hackney.gov.uk/ results-of-broadway-market-transport-study/

London Fields traffic management scheme latest update

A REPORT into a traffic management scheme in the London Fields area has been released.

It was commissioned following a public consultation in December 2015 on options to reduce the amount of traffic using Middleton Road, as part of TfL's Quietway 2 route between Bloomsbury and Walthamstow.

Last July, the Council agreed to implement width restrictions in Middleton Road to bar heavy goods vehicles. It also pledged to work with residents and cycling groups to investigate and identify further options to address the traffic and pollution issues raised.

The Council appointed independent consultants to review the consultation responses, analyse concerns, score them against the Council's transport strategy and recommend actions in order of priority.

Issues highlighted in the report include traffic volumes and speeds, air quality, safety and local schools.

Council officers will now meet with local groups and key stakeholders to discuss the best way forward following the report.

The Council will then announce proposals for new traffic management and air quality schemes in the area, which tackle some of the issues highlighted in the report, along with a proposed programme for consultation with residents.

HILDREN got a taste of outdoor fun by climbing trees, making mud cakes and helping to build a fire when the new Hackney Forest School opened.

TV presenter Tommy Walsh and Meg Hillier MP officially cut the ribbon at a ceremony on 10 June in front of more than 400 people at Clapton Children's Centre. Speaker of Hackney, Soraya Adejare, and Deputy Mayor, Anntoinette Bramble, also attended the event.

The Deputy Mayor said: "With Hackney Forest School, parents and carers, and their children can learn together about nature and explore the great outdoors.

"The Hackney Forest School can help ignite a curiosity about the world around them right on their doorstep, such as in Wick Wood and Hackney Marshes."

Forest School programmes based at the centre run all year, in all weathers. They are aimed at two to 11-yearolds. Sessions range from children only, to parent and children outdoor workshops.

News in brief

Lessons in dealing with danger

PUPILS at St Mary's C of E Primary School, in Stoke Newington, experienced a graduation of a different kind, earning their stripes at a new 'Danger Academy' They were among the first in the UK to trial a new scheme which aims to equip children with the skills to respond to emergency situations. Called The Danger Squad, the programme uses six fictional characters, and a sniffer dog, to engage children, aged five and six, in issues from fire safety to terrorist situations.

The scheme hopes to reach 1,000 pupils before becoming available to all schools later this summer. Headteacher Jane O'Brien, said: "We were delighted to be a part of the pilot for this programme. Not only does it promote a very important message for the children, but it does so in a fun and engaging way that will resonate with the learners."

Hunting for new stars in space

SCHOOLCHILDREN from Colvestone Primary School, in Dalston, are joining children from as far afield as Moscow in an international scheme to explore unchartered territories in space.

They will learn about astronomy and hunt for new stars by analysing pictures produced by a super powerful telescope in Australia.

The Hackney students will be helped by astronomers from University College London's physics and astronomy department, and will be joined by their counterparts in Moscow for weekly Skype conferences.

Called Discovery Within A Week, the project is the brainchild of Noosphere, a charitable organisation founded by Russian philanthropist Yelena Baturina. It is being rolled out in London, with the support of the Mayor's Fund for London and the Be OPEN creative think tank. Visit: www.mayorsfundforlondon.org.uk/ programme/discovery-within-a-week/

Earning their spurs

■OR a former England player, the tournament must have been one of the most sedate of his career.

Former Tottenham Hotspur captain Gary Mabbutt led six local teams in warm-up sessions, before they battled it out at the Festival of Football on Hackney Marshes on 4 June.

Unusually however, in a sport where the average retirement age is 35, all the players limbering up were aged over 40, with some edging into their 70s.

And when they hit the pitch, the pace was leisurely to say the least: this, after all,

I'm really happy doing this today and meeting new people, I was born here so I'm coming home to play was a walking football tournament. The free day was organised by Lovefootball, with the aim of promoting physical activity for the over 40s.

Each of the 50 men and women who took part wore a free football kit and were presented with a medal at the end of the tournament. Nishi Landa said: "I didn't mind getting up early for this, I was excited! I want to join a walking football group, so this tournament gave me a chance to get a feel for the game.

"Football is my hobby. I enjoy it and it gets me healthy. I'm really happy I'm doing this today and meeting new people. I was born here at Homerton hospital, so I'm coming home to play."

Supporting dementia friends

THE Council has teamed up with Hackney Dementia Action Alliance to support the Alzheimer's Society's dementia friends programme. With more than 1,300 people in the borough living with dementia, the scheme aims to transform the way people think, talk and act in relation to the condition. Residents can train to be a dementia friend

by learning more about the condition and the small ways people can help. From telling friends about the scheme to visiting someone living with dementia.

The objective is to tackle the stigma and lack of understanding that leaves many people with the condition feeling socially excluded.

Dementia is not a natural part of ageing, it is not caused by diseases of the brain, nor is it just about loss of memory, it can affect someone's thinking, communication and ability to perform everyday tasks. To find out more about becoming a dementia friend, visit: www.dementiafriends.org.uk

A year of free sickle cell events

A WHOLE year of free events for those with sickle cell and their families begins next month.

The Sickle Cell Society is organising the programme of events, which will include parent support sessions, Zumba and dance classes, and sessions on everything from nutrition and education to pain and stress management.

The first event is planned for 1 July. Families with sickle cell are invited to meet other local people with similar experiences over a free lunch. There will also be an opportunity to try a gentle Tai Chi exercise. No experience is necessary but booking is essential.

To find out more, e-mail blaire.barrett@ sicklecellsociety.org or call: 020 7683 4570.

Help to make borough accessible for everyone

THE Council is working to make Hackney accessible for everyone, and is searching for more local disabled people to get involved.

Having limited mobility, vision, hearing, a learning difficulty or other type of impairment can sometimes mean that road signage, no ramp access or lack of specialised facilities can make even a trip to the shops challenging.

The Council has launched a campaign, 'Hackney an Accessible Place for Everyone' to highlight and address the needs of disabled people in the borough. Guided visits have been organised to areas experiencing rapid redevelopment - Stamford Hill, Abney Park, Hackney Central, Dalston and Shoreditch – to explore how disabled access can be improved.

Over 15 disabled people, councillors and staff who work in relevant departments like planning, transportation and town centre management have received training to lead these visits. More participants are needed however. To volunteer, e-mail: rachel.salmon@ hackney.gov.uk, call: 020 8356 7732, or text: 07941 687 153.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see Hackney has 57 councillors representing Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville, was directly elected by the borough in September 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Rosemary Sales.

Recipes straight from the chefs at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. This quick and light summer dish is the ideal starter or even main course when the heat is on. The Waterhouse chefs explain how to make it zing.

Prawn salad

Serves 2

Preparation time 20 mins

Cooling time 5 mins

• Make a thousand island sauce by combining the shallots, gherkins, capers, tomato ketchup, mayonnaise, tabasco and a squeeze of lemon juice. Season to taste

Prepare the lettuce by cutting the bottoms off, and wash thoroughly. Dry in a salad spinner or colander and roughly chop

• Add the prawns to the thousand island

• Place the lettuce on a plate and spoon on the dressing and mix in well prawn mixture. Enjoy.

Method

Ingredients

- 4 heads of baby gem lettuce
- 200g cooked baby prawns
- 2 shallots finely diced
- 2 gherkins finely diced
- 10g capers (without brine) roughly chopped
- 75g tomato ketchup
- •75g mayonnaise

Have your say: Haggerston Baths consultation plans

A REPORT has been published on the future redevelopment of Haggerston Baths following a public consultation in May.

Residents and businesses were asked to give their views on proposals to bring the building back in to use by two shortlisted developers: Castle Forge Partners, and London & Regional Properties.

The aim was to identify a long-term and selfsustaining future for the Grade II listed building and preserve public access to this unique and much loved Hackney landmark.

The report suggests a proposal that offers more mixed use and flexible space, whilst also being sensitive to the building's architecture, which would be more popular with residents.

The Council has passed the findings onto both developers to consider before submitting their final proposals. Council officers will assess the final submissions and make a recommendation to the Council's Cabinet, which will take the final decision.

The consultation report can be viewed, at: hackney. gov.uk/haggerwston-baths

Student Success

at BSix

The most important reason for choosing a course is that it will help you to achieve your future career ambition. There are so many successful BSix student progression stories... here are a few of them...

Abdelilah Afdel

Where did you study before BSix?

I studied at Highbury Grove Secondary School.

What did you study?

I studied GCSE Mathematics, Science, English, ICT, RE and BTEC Business.

What are you doing now?

I'm currently studying Mechanical Engineering at the University of Surrey.

How has BSix helped you?

BSIX has given me a self-motivating learning environment with access to help when I needed it. The facilities they offered at the time were immensely beneficial to me.

What advice would you give to new students at BSix?

Remain self-motivated and acknowledge that you will make mistakes and you will learn from them. Let it fuel you to strive for better. You need to be able to push yourself harder than anyone else and at the same time be wary to take care of yourself better than anyone else.

Pamilerin Obembe

Where did you study before BSix?

I studied at Holy Family Catholic School.

What did you study?

I studied Psychology, Drama and English Language & Literature.

What are you doing now?

I am studying BSc Psychology at the University of Northampton.

How has BSix helped you?

BSix helped me build me up when I was at my lowest by giving me the support that I needed in order to get to university. BSix trained me in marketing, events, and leadership skills. As well as learning how to be a voice for students.

What advice would you give to new students at BSix?

To become a student ambassador and if you need help ask for it.
